

MONTE PASCOE
CIVIC LEADERSHIP AWARD

Throughout his life, Monte Pascoe demonstrated the importance of civic engagement and community service. As a member of the Denver Water Board and executive director of the Colorado Department of Natural Resources, Monte's visionary leadership helped define and protect our landscape by preserving water and open space for our region and state. Active in local politics and on numerous community boards, Monte is remembered for his personal convictions, courage and determination to build a better future for Denver. Driven by a willingness to act in support of his principles, Monte Pascoe led the fight for the desegregation of the Denver Public Schools.

The Monte Pascoe Award is presented by the Mayor of Denver annually at the Denver Metro Chamber of Commerce's "State of the City" luncheon to a community member who exemplifies the values of community service, leadership and civic engagement embodied by Monte Pascoe.

The award will be presented to the individual volunteer who has demonstrated

- extraordinary service to family success, community improvement and international understanding;
- encouragement and belief in others who seek to contribute to the community;
- dedication to justice and equal educational opportunity for all people;
- a willingness to assume responsibility for leadership.

If you know of someone who has made a positive impact in these areas, you may nominate them to receive the Monte Pascoe Civic Leadership Award.
